Fee: Approximately $380

COLG 311: Topic: Our Place in the World

Greg Walker

After spending an extended period of time abroad and away from all the comforts of home and the USA, what do you take away? What have you learned about the world, its cultures, America, and yourself? How do you see the world differently? How do you see yourself, your home, your friends, CSB/SJU, and America? This seminar is a discussion and writing course designed for students returning from a study abroad experience who wish to deepen their understanding of the time spent abroad. Study abroad experiences are invariably life changing. Questions emerge about how to understand the fullness and complexity of the experience and how to deal with a world that does not look the same as it did before you left this country. The Contemporary Global Topics seminar is intended to address these questions. Participating in it will help facilitate study abroad program participants' re-entry into the CSB/SJU communities and enrich these communities through sharing and applying the insights, skills and wisdom learned from your time out and about in the world.

Our sessions will focus on closely examining and exploring insights gained from your time abroad. We will work to expand these insights to help you better understand what new possibilities are emerging from your international experiences. Dialogue and discussion with other returnees will be interwoven with a variety of text and media sources to facilitate sharing of your international experiences.

CSCI 161: Introduction to Problem-Solving & Programming

Lynn Ziegler

Introduces the fundamental concepts of problem-solving and programming from an object-oriented perspective. Through the study of object-oriented design, this course also introduces the basics of human-computer interfaces, graphics, and the social implications of computing.

ECON 329: Economics of Health Care

Emphasis on the application of economic reasoning to an understanding of the health care system of the United States. Evaluation of the changing nature of health care and its consequences for the medical professions and institutions. Analysis of public policy for provision and financing of health care.

PREREQUISITE: ECON 111

MGMT 394: Management Practicum

Students will learn and develop skills in library and field research and apply those skills by researching and writing a case study of an entrepreneurial business. Class sessions will be arranged with the instructor and will cover research methods early in the semester and writing and editing of case studies later. The class will not meet every week; however, Tuesday evenings will be used for group meetings. Students will carry out the research and writing project in teams of three. Students will submit their work to appropriate undergraduate research conferences, journals or competitions. Completion of MGMT 201 and permission of instructor required.
